HITLER'S U. S. AGENT VANISHES; O'BRIEN BARS NAZI MEET

PROPAGANDIST DEPORTED TO HAVE FLED TO GERMANY

New York Mayor Refuses to Allow "Alien Agitators" Control Gathering by "Terrorism"

New York, Oct. 26 (AP)—Whereabouts of Heinz Spanknobel, reputed Nazi propagandist chief, became a matter of conjecture today following Mayor John P. O'Brien's refusal to lift his ban on a "German Day" celebration next Sunday.

Reports were current that he had sailed suddenly last night for Germany on recall by Berlin—reports which were widely discounted in German-American quarters of New York city and denied by one steamship line with a vessel sailing last night.

One of Spanknobel's bitterest opponents said the matter in which the sailing information came to him aroused his suspicion. A close associate of Dr. Wilhelm Focke, honorary president of the United German Societies, revealed that Spanknobel was something of a "mystery man" even to his acquaintances. He said no one apparently knew where he lived, and that he had not been seen since previous to the city hall hearing on the proposed Sunday celebration.

The mayor, after an upsurge hearing guarded by 100 policemen, refused last night to lift his ban on the meeting, which opponents had denounced as a forum for Nazi propaganda.

He said, "a group of propagandists sent here by a foreign power" had asked control of the United German Societies, which planned the meeting. The meeting, he said, would "lead to violence, riot and possibly loss of life."

Rev. William Pope, acting head of the societies, denied Nazi had control and promised "no racial remarks" would be made, but the mayor remained adamant. Board of appeals shook the

Playboy Son-in-Law Taken to Task in Cuban Deal

New York, Oct. 26 (AP)—Taking their knitting along, Viola Gentry and Mary Samson are all set to stay in the air for a month. They twiddled their thumbs impatiently today as they waited for a decision to take off on their endurance flight, in which they hope to break the women's record of eight days, four hours, set two years ago by Mrs. Louise Thaden and Mrs. Frances Marshall.

Miss Gentry, the gallant woman flyer who was told after her graduation in 1929 that she would never fly again, attended to the important detail of a permanent stay this afternoon, and then remarked:

"We're going to stay up until we have to come down. We intend to stay up a month if possible, and two weeks at the least."

Further preparation for the flight will include:

Knitting needles for two, and plenty of yarn; detective stories for Miss Gentry; sewing puzzles for Mrs. Samson; a couple of decks of cards, for playing "Clairo," and a down filled sleeping bag.

The Senate inquiry turned upon a deal for $400,000 bonds that were issued. Ferdinand Pecora, special Senate counsel, wanted to know why the bank failed to exercise a six months' option, expiring Aug. 25, 1933, to float the $400,000.

It was provided for in a contract, under which the bank did issue $400,000 bonds and extended an additional $200,000 credit to Cuba earlier in 1933. The first $300,000 received from sale of the bonds in the American public was used to redeem $200,000 in Cuban public works certificates, held by the Chase Bank and some associates.

The revelations showed the bank watched out carefully for its own interests while Albert H. Wiggin was its directing head. The inquiry further showed that Winthrop W. Aldrich, present chairman, entered the bank. It had dug into its own pocket to pay interest on bonds and to redeem certificates.

The victim was William John, 53, last night three men invaded the home of another worker, Thomas Hives of Marlton Ave., Montclair, and beat him.

Twelve state troopers are on duty in this section as a result of the labor trouble and word was received that Governor Ely had promised "to send the whole force, if necessary."

MAYOR TRIPS CHARGE
Troupers appeared here for the first time yesterday and brought a protest from Mayor Horace Baker last night. The mayor declared the strike, although protested, had not brought a simple arrest for an act of violence and that Governor Ely was playing "politics" in sending troops here.

Governor Ely was indignant at this accusation and declared that if anyone was playing politics, it was Mayor Baker. He pointed out that the mayor was seeking re-election while he was not planning to run for office again and therefore was not for him to "play politics."

NEEDHAM GETS ORDER
The governor recently admitted sending the troops there, and declared this action had been taken because some 500 workers under union contracts, at the Douglas plant, were being paid, although they were not working.

"When I found that no protection is being given them, as the duty of the mayor requires, I ordered Gen. Needham to send troops to the city," he added.

At the same time Reno announced he would take the farmers' fight direct to the people today in a nation-wide broadcast.

Washington, Oct. 26 (AP)—The Chase National Bank was drawn unknowingly into making a $100,000 loan to President Gerardo Machado of Cuba in December, 1932, in the midst of negotiations to float a $600,000 governmental loan, International News Service learned today.

The personal loan was made Machado by Jean Obergen, his "handsome playboy" son-in-law, who was a $10,000-a-year joint manager of the Santa Fe Havana branch. The loan was made on an unsecured note without consulting New York officials of the bank.

Subsequently, the bank provided Machado a $100,000 drawing account and in 1932, raised this to $200,000.

WINNER STAYS ON OLD JOB

Kaminski Gets Belated Offer of 1530 Pounds for Sweeps Ticket

With his saw, a cheese sandwich, a bottle of cold coffee and his light calling for $142,000, the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes, recently Kaminski left his South Boston home for his 63-year-old carpenter's job at 6:30 this morning.

Just as he did on the mornings of the days that had seen no fortune in rapping up over the horizon line of his least expectations. The life-long routine of a hard working man can't be displaced with a night and a breakfast. Kaminski hasn't got the money yet.

TO BUY FARM FOR LOSER
He expects to get the money, all right, and buy a farm and other things for his friend, Joseph Kubic, who was a victim of the sweepstakes. Kaminski will collect the Kubic's name and the Kaminski's cash payment and everything will be settled.

Before he became a ticket holder he was a chance to win the prize. Kaminski tried to sell it for $250 but couldn't find anybody who could afford it.

The routine of his household was little altered than usual for eight weeks. He had a wife and six children stayed up a little later than usual for eight weeks. He had a wife and six children stayed up a little later than usual for eight weeks.

RAIN TO CHASE GOLD WINDS

Boston is due to shiver again tonight with the early taste of winter, but late in the night rain is expected to bring back a more moderate temperature.

Today was the coldest Oct. 26 in 70 years, the mercury dropping to 29 degrees at 7 a. m., making the low reading for Oct. 26 in 1904 back in 1879, however, the low temperature was recorded as 28 degrees for the all-time record in Boston.

While Boston's official minimum temperature was 27 degrees, in Lexington and other sections of the suburbs the early morning temperatures as low as 20 degrees were reported.

The city escaped the fierce storm which has wreaked havoc in northern New England, particularly Vermont. The heavy rains Tuesday were the worst effects of the storm.

In Vermont a wild snow, rain and hail storm practically stopped transportation and tied up communication systems. Three principal lines and several towns were isolated last night by the snapping of 1000 telephone poles by the storm. Crows of emergency telephone workers were rushed from here to Vermont to string emergency lines in the accident area.

Think of it! A five foot storm surge in the heart of the Chesapeake channel, E. R. Water, in connection with the Boston Evening American and Sunday American, has established this record service. We are invited to visit here with Barbara Holmes at any hour.

U. S. Shoots Gold Up; Farm Prices Climb

long as it is, the administration will proceed cautiously with its gold price-fixing.

WILL BOOST PRICES

Another aid to the corn farmers of the Middle West was furnished by the government's "pegging" the price at 90 cents a bushel, which accomplished as in the case of cotton by the government agreeing to loan farmers 90 cents a bushel in those states which have warehouse acts. The loans are contingent upon producers' agreements to reduce acreage.

The new policy has had the effect of quieting, for the moment at least, the demands of the inflationists here in Congress for direct currency expansion. They describe the administration's new gold policy as "indirect inflation" and for the time being are content to give it a chance.

The position of the dollar in foreign exchange is not, for the time being, worrying administration officials. Their concern is primarily the position of the dollar at home and its relationship to basic commodities prices. President Roosevelt has observed that the dollar's position abroad was evergreening.

U. S. Dollar Ends at 17 Francs in Paris

Paris, Oct. 26 (INS)—The American dollar closed slightly higher on the Bourse today, buying 17 francs at the close against yesterday's close of 16.83.

Today's close was fractionally under the opening, at which the dollar bought 17.01 francs.

Dollar Gains in London Market Despite Setback

London, Oct. 26 (INS)—After showing improvement at the opening, when it was quoted at $4.74 to the pound sterling on the London Exchange, the American dollar resumed its decline again today and touched $4.75 to the pound sterling at 11:30 a. m.

This mark, however, was better than yesterday's closing price of $4.77.

The pound opened at 80.15 francs on Paris and then slipped to 80.

The gold price staged a sensational rise of 8 1/2 pence, with gold selling at 120 shillings 9 1/2 pence per ounce. This price included a premium of 8 1/2 pence over the Bank of France buying rate.

"Bullion dealers say they would continue to fix the gold price in accordance with the franc and sterling exchange rate, and that they did not anticipate the American gold buying rate, but they said it would have much effect on the gold price which limited their purchases from American gold producers."

7 DROWNED, 5 KILLED IN CARS

Binghamton, N. Y., Oct. 26 (AP)—Seven persons, laughing and joking on their way to a birthday party, were drowned last night when their car rolled into the Susquehanna river.

The dead are Elsie Eldred, 14, in whose honor the party was planned; Avia Houston, another 14-year-old girl; Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Lord and their three children, Louis, 9; Austin, 6; and Ardean, 2.

After steaming into a driveway to back out, Lord started to ask out. The car backed down an embankment into the icy water.

Half an hour later a passerby saw the headlight, almost submerged, shining out of the river. All had died trapped inside the car, except two children whose bodies were found nearby.

Saltillo, Miss., Oct. 26 (AP)—A 16-year-old girl, critically injured, was the only survivor today of a railroad crossing accident here that claimed the lives of her parents, a brother and sister and a friend.

The five were killed when a fast passenger train struck their car last night.

The dead: Mr. and Mrs. Dallas Pearson, their two children, Christine, 11, and Artie Lee, 4; and Gib Ford, 4. Gertrude was not expected to live.

Roosevelt's New Deal in Gold Stirs Rush Like '49 in California

Panning For Gold

President Roosevelt's drive to send prices booming and quickly bring back prosperity has found the "gold country" responding as it has not responded since the mad days after the '49 boom started. Men and women in hundreds of gold-mining regions are engaged now in placer mining. Here is a scene near Denver, with miners of both sections panning for the yellow metal. Similar scenes are being enacted in Alaska, California, Arizona—wherever gold is found. (International News Photo.)

CREGG BUILDING IS LOOTED

Lawrence, Oct. 26—Disdainful of the fact that the building is owned by Dist. Atty. Hugh A. Cragg and his brothers and that the prosecutor is one of the tenants, a burglar rifled two establishments in the Cragg Building in Amesbury at, early today and attempted to enter a third.

As soon as detectives examined the rifled premises, which are only a block from police headquarters, they announced the burglaries bore the "hall mark" of John J. Puck of Lawrence, who escaped from Concord Reformatory two days ago.

A hunt for Puck was begun after police learned he had been seen on the street.

On the sixth floor the burglar entered the John Hancock Life Insurance Co. office and stole $33 from the desk of Manager T. P. Donahue, leaving a safe unopened.

On the street floor entrance was forced into the southwest of Thomas Byrne, and $250 in cash and $25 in cigarettes and cigar stolen.

Jobs for 15,000 and Revival of Long "Dead" Industry Seen at Once

Sacramento, Cal., Oct. 26 (INS)—Spurred by sky-high gold prices and revived spirit reminiscent of the booming '49 era, California's mining industry was on the way today to double its gold production to a volume of more than $25,000,000 annually, giving employment to 15,000 additional mine workers and re-erecting dormant mining properties in the mother lode country.

$1,000,000 in Gold Diggers Put In

By Oct. 26 (INS)—More than $1,000,000 worth of machinery to be used in digging gold has been shipped from Denver to mining camps in Colorado and surrounding states within the past few months, local manufacturers revealed today. The machinery was for installation in mines that had been reopened by recent rises in the price of gold.

In the pioneer gold camps where known ore bodies still await development, Jarvis reported, "until now, mining has suffered from high production costs which retarded the mining of low grade ore."

The new deal, however, will open up these fields, bringing millions in outside capital to California.

Increased mining operations were reported today by the Natoms Company headed by Sen. Thomas McCormack. New dredges were being added to the fleet of 10 now operating in fields near the Sacramento river banks.

Boston Gold Market Slack as Buyers Wait for Stabilized Price

Boston gold dealers were not at all pleased today with the fluctuating gold market even though the price of gold was soaring in the new Roosevelt drive for commodity price-fixing and managed currency.

While the dealers were optimistic of an ultimate price level for the gold market, temporarily they claimed the fluctuating price was causing a halt in their business. Customers are waiting until a more stabilized market has been reached, they said.

Thomas F. Henry, Riverside Gold Leaf Co., said that his firm could purchase all the gold it wanted as contrasted with the gold embargo situation of last March during the bank holiday, but that the customers were breaking their contracts because of the necessity of meeting price changes.

NOT WASTING IT

"We have to pay $10 and $11 more for gold now than we used to," he announced. "Naturally the customers are kicking about it. They are not buying as they should. They are buying only so much as they actually need for the amount of work shipped and they are using the gold more sparingly."

"It is a day to day proposition with us and the situation will continue this way until the market becomes settled. As it is, gold buyers are in a considerable grip in the amount of gold has resulted from the no stimulation of gold trading at Washington. Fred P. Lambert of the Fred P. Lambert Co., Inc.

SALES REDUCED

"Customers are waiting for settled prices and dealers find it difficult to meet constantly as at one price today, and tomorrow when the price goes up we must fill the order at the original price. We find ourselves on the losing end very often."

H. H. Hillyer of the Cabot & Hillyer Co., dealers in gold for 37 years, said:

"Customers are only waiting half as much gold as they did before. Ordinarily they bought 100 books of gold leaf and at times

Colonial Silhouettes

By LAURA WHEELER

Silhouettes in cross stitch are a decoration that is attractive in any home. Having an old-time quaintness, they are as much in vogue today as they ever were.

Done in one color thread, they are especially interesting to make, for cross stitch is quick to do, and each bit added to the embroidery shows up. These quaint scenes are attractive subjects to work on, for one could so easily weave an interesting story around them. They lend themselves not only to pictures, but are decorative as customs, tray cloths or linens.

Pattern 437 contains a transfer pattern of two design shown, which measure 8 1/2 inches, and detailed directions and yardage for doing these as pictures.
Send 30c for this pattern to Boston Evening American Needlecraft

SMALL FARMS OF MID-CITY NEEDY

Possibility that the federal government may allocate between $1,000,000 and $2,000,000 to Massachusetts for establishment of small self-sustaining farms near key cities was revealed today by Dr. Arthur Gilbert, state commissioner of agriculture.

The farms will be for tenancy of small wage earners in the city who will be offered an opportunity to give up their city struggles and become self-supporting on the soil.

Two weeks ago, said Dr. Gilbert, "I dropped in on M. L. Wilson, a former student of mine at Cornell University and now director of the experimental sustenance homestead plan under Secretary Ickes of the Department of the Interior."

MAY COST $2,000,000
"Under last plan, the government passed a law allowing the spending of $2,000,000 for that particular purpose."

"I told Wilson I thought Massachusetts should get part of that money. He said, 'I am going to try to get $1,000,000 to $2,000,000.'"

"I will confer with Gov. Ely early next week with reference to the matter and I will also confer with the State Housing Commission."

"With the money allotted by the federal government, fertile lands near large cities in Massachusetts, possibly Lowell, Worcester and maybe Boston, will be purchased and model dwellings of five or six rooms and small barns erected."

FOR NO COMPETITION
"The plan is to have men who work in the cities take up these places in the country and live there with their families and be self-sustaining so far as products of the soil are concerned."

"They will raise only what they can use themselves, and there is no intention of competing with the commercial farmer."

McAdoo Approves of Soviet Accord
New York, Oct. 26 (AP)—Saying that he saw no reason in Moscow, U. S. Sen. William G. McAdoo of California, returned from a short tour of Europe today and called on President Roosevelt to resume trade relations with Russia.

very wise, indeed.
In an interview given while the McAdoo Center in Savoy made its way from quarantine to its dock, the Senator said: "There was never any reason why recognition of Russia should have been withheld."

SOMMER NOTES TO BISHOP

Commission to recommend a super-detective bureau to police of the state.

HIT POLICE CHIEFS
The shooting of Sommer in a $100 holdup, followed by the disclosure that Charles Hoffman, gunman sought for the crime, was free on $40,000 alleged straw bail when he should have been held in any amount, is understood to have decided the commission plan.

The voluminous report of the commission, probably to be filed early in December, will feature the police recommendation. It was drafted, together with findings that Commissioner Hultman and other police heads have shown inability to cope with the crime problem. Many other recommendations, dealing with the judiciary, jury fixing, straw bondsmen and so on, will be contained in the report to the commission, which holds its first public hearing at the State House Monday, November 4, at 10:30.

CENTRALIZE DETECTIVES
The report will further contain detailed descriptions of speakeasies, disorderly houses, gambling places and other evidences of vice and corruption throughout the state, with particular attention to movements featuring the same.

Information concerning these matters, including addresses and names of proprietors of resorts, has been obtained during the three months of its existence by investigators for the commission, which worked with an appropriation of only $10,000.

Their most sensational recommendation, which is expected to meet with much opposition, will be the centralized state detective bureau, with power to investigate local police and crime and corruption anywhere in the state.

The project contains no provision for the abolition of municipal police departments, but is believed to be a step forward in the battle against crime.

At present the state detective bureau and the state police have no power to investigate alleged crimes or misdemeanors of municipal police.

It is understood the report will also recommend that district judges, now part-time jurists, be paid a stipulated salary and serve only as jurists.

In regard to jury fixing it was learned the commission favors that jury lists be drawn by the court rather than the present arrangement.

Among the chief acts of negligence understood to be charged against the Boston police in the report is the release of Hoffman wanted not only in Suffolk County but in Middlesex as well for armed robbery, and in New Jersey, an escaped convict.

UNSOLVED CRIMES
In addition to the crime commission's investigation of the Hoffman case, Governor Canning asked them for the facts on it and the office of Dist. Atty. Foley is conducting a probe.

Hoffman defaulted in Suffolk Superior Court the day the Cambridge inventor was slain, and police have been unable to obtain any trace of him.

Other recent crimes which are said to have influenced the crime commission in its recommendation for a central detective bureau are the Solomon murder at the Cotton Club, Franklin Pearce bludgeoned slaying on Chow Choo, South Street post office robbery, Brookline Trust Company holdup and several juries for robbery, for all of which no one has been punished.

Grid Injuries Fatal
Seattle, Oct. 26—Archie Dwyer, 17, Aurora high school football player, injured in a game here, is dead.

Japan to Recruit Human Torpedoes

London, Oct. 26 (INS)—Japanese naval men are to be asked to volunteer for certain death, according to a Tokyo dispatch to the Daily Herald, that says recruiting will start in the new year for "human torpedoes" in naval engagements.

Naval engineers have perfected a new type of torpedo fitted with rudder and room for a steersman when it is launched from a Japanese ship.

The steersman would be a hero in death, an ideal that appeals particularly to the Japanese mind.

SCIENCE CRIME BUREAU URGED

Establishment of a crime detection laboratory in New England, with its scientific apparatus and personnel available to the smallest hamlets, was recommended today to the chiefs.

Dr. Simon, chairman of the association's committee on criminal science, fostered the idea.

Such a laboratory, Dr. Simon said, should be equipped with the latest scientific knowledge on handwriting, photography, fingerprinting, chemistry, ballistics and other studies in order to keep ahead of the "lean toward science by arch criminals of today."

Dr. Simon suggested that a group of public-spirited citizens or a group interested in criminal science might endow the laboratory in the event that public money could not be obtained.

1000 BAPTISTS
AT CONCLAVE
Taunton, Oct. 26—More than 1000 persons are expected to attend the closing session of the Massachusetts Baptist Convention, in Winstrop Street Baptist Church here today.

The keynote of the convention was said tonight by the Rev. G. Pitt Beers who advocated a personal campaign to bring about the activities of the church.

Earlier in the day he addressed the convention and pointed out that various groups in the community have been neglected and explained how this could be remedied. He also suggested ways and means of bringing others into the church.

W. R. Hearst Lauds Plans for New Navy As Peace Guarantee

[illegible][illegible]

MR. HEARST LAUDS NAVY

As an old friend of Secretary Swannson, who was in the first cabinet of President Theodore Roosevelt, Mr. Hearst said that the navy was the backbone of the nation. He said:

"California welcomes Secretary Swannson personally with the warmest of greetings. America depended upon to protect its peaceful people against aggression—and the floating forts and forces with which we would repel any invader and keep our shores free from the horrors of war."

"Fifty years have passed since Grover Cleveland's Democratic day. Again the Navy has been

With Dr. Sekner in command of the dirigible was a landing at Curtis-Reynolds airport in Akron. The 250 U.S. soldiers hurried to the airport. As a measure of precaution 250 soldiers were stationed at the port, while the huge ship remained in the air.

A reunion committee made up of world fair and city officials met at the airport to greet the dirigible.

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

It is not too much to say that Lloyd George's "War Memoirs" (Little Brown), of which the first volume out of four has been published, is the most exciting book of the season. Of course, it is expected to be, and it has not disappointed expectation. Lloyd George is a master of the pen, and the inner ring that conducted England's war efforts is dead, and Lord Gray, Earl of Bona, Lord Law and Northcliffe is well. Churchill has told the story. Now it is the turn of the man who, more than any other, organized the war.

It is interesting to note that he wastes no time on his early days, the story by which he rose from radical Welsh lawyer and promoter to the office of Chancellor of the Exchequer in the innermost circle of modern times. Some day, perhaps, he will write that. It needs writing. For his Unemployment Insurance bill of 1921 proved a landmark in the welfare of England after the war.

From Chancellor to War Secretary, after Kitchener's drowning, in the coalition cabinet he stood steadily. Then, seeing the Aqueduct was no man for the conduct of this Titanic effort, he pushed him with the support of Northcliffe and made himself Premier. To him, more than to any other single man, perhaps, the Allies owed the fact that the Americans came into action in time and the fact that the British war effort was finally, only just in time, making its mark in the final idea of unified control under Foch, for which Lloyd George had always been hammering.

It is not too much to say that in the first years Lloyd George was the only man in high place who realized the demands of a war on this hitherto unprecedented scale. Kitchener was still fighting it in terms of the Sudan and the Transvaal. He could not understand the part of the British army was being decimated for want of munitions. Kitchener did not believe in the German invasion of Serbia until Lloyd George, knowing that it must have occurred, forced the despatch unopposed in the War Office.

Kitchener of Khartoum, the hand of military hero, the idol of O. Henry's fiction, had his death in the North Sea probably and the loss of thousands of British soldiers. Lloyd George became Secretary for War, the man in charge of the munitions problem for the moment the situation was eased.

It was Lloyd George who advanced an eastern offensive, with Serbia, Bulgaria, Rumania, and Greece all flung against the same Austro-Hungarian empire. He failed to get it over. Instead, he led and halfhearted Gallipoli expedition was tried out, Churchill not without success. Rumania and Bulgaria were left to be crushed one by one. Such a strategy might well have succeeded against Austria. Already hard-bitten by Russia. At least it would have given the British Front breathing space to consolidate its energies. The man was right in bringing Austria to the door, he was right in his insistence on a unified command, he was right about munitions, he may well have been right about the Balkans.

The man does not hesitate to accept responsibility for the failure. He blames the War Office for keeping the politicians in the rear of grandiose commitments with France; he blames Kitchener for "telling the cabinet as little as he had to and getting back to his desk as quickly as he could." He says that the British and French for their failure to furnish his munitions and supplies, thus leading to the later helplessness and defeat of the army.

He blames the British and French for their natural inability to visualize the war as all fronts, and for their thing about beyond human capacity. And he tells all about it. He treated the Russian Revolution as a disaster. He treated the Russian collapse in 1915 through their failure to furnish his munitions and supplies, thus leading to the later helplessness and defeat of the army.

MR. BOSS

By JACK CONWAY
COLONEL BOB McKirdy of the West End Order of Colonians came in out of the cold to hold conversation with me. As man and boy the Colonel has been interested in the success of amateur boxing tournaments promoted by the St. Joseph's T. A. Society.

Along with Billy Cuddy the Colonel has staged amateur boxing shows which have brought talent from every part of the world. Even Chicago and Hindu boxers have picked up their medals and cur fare at St. Joe offerings.

The Colonel has also promoted a number of professional shows. He has been a member of the 1932 season, yet came along fast and now is a very efficient coach. He has been a member of the 1932 season, yet came along fast and now is a very efficient coach.

B. J. Buoy Hopes for B.C. Win

Confident after a pair of victories over Colby and Vermont, something rare and therefore all the more to be enjoyed, Boston University is building its hopes on taking the Eagles of Boston College by surprise and thereby winning its first victory since the series started back in 1927.

It is amazing how those two aforementioned wins have bolstered the Terrier's self respect and made an aggressive, formidable outfit out of a discouraged, unorganized and timid team.

When the season opened under the backfired play-control system which was finally discarded after almost wrecking a perfectly sound lineup, there wasn't one outstanding ball carrier in the Terrier backfield.

George Patton shot into the forefront both as a runner and a passer. He was a real find for the Terriers. He was a real find for the Terriers. He was a real find for the Terriers.
